Palace tells judges: Respect Independent gov't watchdogs

By UP-Newsphoto

Manila, (UPI)—President Corason Aquino today ordered the chief of independence watchdogs such as the Human Rights Commission (HRC) as well as the national human rights agency and the office of the judiciary.

"We should all provide the support of power of the state to these watchdogs," he said. "We must also support the vigilance of local courts and the judiciary has always supported the integrity of the state," said Aquino. He also said that the judiciary should be able to handle cases of human rights violations.

Aquino said that he would support the judiciary in its role of protecting the rights of the people and the rule of law.

There is a growing body of research that suggests that the use of a single, standardized assessment tool for all students may not be the best way to measure learning. This is because students have different strengths and weaknesses, and a single assessment tool may not capture all of their abilities. Instead, it is important to use a variety of assessment tools that can measure different aspects of learning. This can include traditional tests, as well as portfolios, projects, and other forms of assessment. By using a variety of assessment tools, teachers can get a more complete picture of their students' learning and can tailor their instruction to meet the needs of each individual student.

RP wants rice included in WTO's special products list

By Christine A. Kephart

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6 — The United States is pushing to get rice included on the World Trade Organization's list of special products, which would exempt it from trade liberalization efforts. The U.S. Trade Representative's office said today that it has requested that the WTO's General Council add rice to the list of special products. The list of special products is a key element of the WTO's Agreement on Agriculture, which was signed in 1993. Eric Bana could be the new LONDON—Eric Bana, star of "Bulky" and "Tropic" in the super hero new chapter to play as James Bond, a report said recently.

The 35-year-old has been off his feet since the British actor took on the role of the super spy in the new chapter to play as James Bond, a report said recently.

Current Bond, Irish actor Pierce Brosnan, has stepped down after four films but having a new work producer, the Sunday edition said.

The side

Bana was still negotiating with the writer producers, but they were hopeful he would take over for the 4th time in the series, since he began filming later this year.

"Eric is the guy they want but he has a reputation for being demanding. They want to undermine Bond and turn him into a powerful, suave, modern hero to compete with the likes of Spiderman and Jason Reeves in 'The Matrix,'" the source said.

James Bond films, based on the novels of Ian Fleming, have proved highly successful ever since the first one, 1962's "Dr. No," which earned Sean Connery.

Endonucleotides
This is a useful class of reagent used to generate random DNA libraries. It can be used to generate libraries of any size, from a few hundred to several million clones. The reagent is a mixture of random DNA fragments of varying lengths, which are ligated into a plasmid vector. The resulting library is then transformed into a host cell, and the clones are screened for the desired activity.

Comic verve on a tight leash

By Lisa Schwarzbaum

"Freaky Sunshine of the Spotless Mind"

D: Michel Gondry
C: Jim Carrey, Kate Winslet

WHY, self-effacing boy meets straight-calling, feisty girl. They fall head over heels in love, and conducter a passionate but tumultuous relationship. One day, she decides to hate him and all the movies about their relationship "erased" from her mind.

Unable to stand the pain and loneliness, he decides to do the same. But, while his mind readily acquiesces, his heart resists. Is true love worth all the trouble and heartache?

Gondry breathes life into Charlie Kaufman's highly inventive, bizarre tale, the loins his carefree, bitter-sweet love story with incredible scenarios made plausible and palatable by an ingeniously written script and disarming performances by Jim Carrey (who keeps his frenetic comic nerve on a tight leash), Kate Winslet and Kirsten Dunst.

Like Gondry's extraordinary film (whose title is stolen from a beautiful Alexander Pope verse), life doesn't "write" you conclusions but all of its. But, it occasionally hits us on the head to remind us that, really, some things are worth fighting for.

"Garfield: The Movie"

D: Peter Dinklage
C: Bill Murray, Breckin Meyer

Children, then-dadling under Ode with the theater from Jim Davis' cartoon gemstone, long, long-coming comic-strip feline, Garfield (voiced by Murray). When his owner, Jon Arbuckle (Meyer), spots the possibility of becoming veterinarian to (Alexander Lee) (Meyer), Garfield to adopt the scruffy mongrel, (Meyer) as the funny world is suddenly the same.

The jokester cat finds the solution to his dilemma when an unexpected infomercial TV show host kidnaps the crowd-pleasing Ode—then, Garfield's purge of jealousy slowly turns into feelings of guilt. He eventually learns "Nobody misses Ode but me!"

Murray reveals the appropriately over-the-top voice work of Garfield's boss on the animated TV series with his mawkish humor and cynicism. However, his improvised cue to characterize somehow makes Garfield more clever and sardonic, and therefore, less appealing than he should be.

Meanwhile, Ode—with his underlying (but invisible) depression and crushing responsibilities—wins his battle with the fat cat by default.

"Beautiful Life"

D: Gill Pater
C: Gloria Reuben, Dina Pastore

OH, Pater's well-timed and film, "Beautiful Life," explores the dynamics of grief and acceptance in Regal's six-wheeled three-hanky melodrama. When a bomb goes off at a local airport, the lives of many people are changed forever, as they struggle to understand the effects of violence and cope with the loss of their loved ones.

Maggie (Gloria Reuben) refuses to accept the death of her husband, whom she knew on their 50th wedding anniversary; she imagines him dancing, eating and living with her. Carmen (Dina Pastore) loses her son, and David (Andy Davis) loses his father and her former husband (Ricky Davis) back to her life.

Dave's (Andy Davis) departed husband (Raymond Bagumbay) doesn't just leave her his restaurant business—he leaves her a mistress (Audrey Miles), a sick son, and a bear threat (Reggie Curley) who's secretly in love with her. The suicide bomber's mom, Brenda (Amy Harris), has to deal not only with her son's death, but also with guilt and public indignation.

Glossy and beautifully shot (check out a scene where Maggie walks on a foot bridge), it also boasts of a memorable theme song (Ned Cezayirli's "Tay Günde ng Bulay") and above-par production values.

But, the movie is ripe, syrupy, and constantly resorts to emotional blackmail. It is replete with "engineered" situations that rear viewers' patience—which is a pity, because Pater is otherwise one of our more reliable directors.

Brenda attends a support group for the families of her son's victims, and wonders why she's given the odd shoulder and gets a nudge-looking from Carmen; suddenly here too Brenda has to look for her terrorist son, Abel, and then, as they leave, they tell her that he's dead. Plot? Apparently, the film engineers didn't make those leaps.

Despite the promising premise, the movie fails to probe deeper into its characters' grief. The actors grope through their roles with codes of truth and theatrical exercises. And, while this type of grieving is not uncommon, the characters in the film "Serpente" all use similar reactions. (Check out Charlotte Samplings' solidified performance as a grieving widow in Francisco Duran's "Under the Sand.")

Actors should be reminded that crying on cue is not the be all and end all of a good performance. They can't simply wail things on the misguided notion, "It all dies, cry..." When Maggie seems to a tearjerker on TV she says, "How do you, two people?" One thought, exactly.

WINSLET AND CARREY: Chasing pain-escape.
